81335	Stydd Hall Darley Moor Ashbourne Derbyshire DE6 2ET	Tower house, now farmhouse. Medieval, C17, c1840 and C20 alterations, originally built for the Knights Hospitallers. Coursed sandstone rubble and red brick with stone dressings and quoins, shallow pitched slate roofs with two large circular stone ridge stacks built of coursed rubble. Deep stone plinth, first and second floor stone bands, moulded Stone eaves cornice and embattled parapets with ridgeback copings. Three storeys and basement. Three bay square plan with small two storey tower to north. East facade has steps up to central C17 doorcase with pilasters to sides, bolection moulded entablature, C20 double glazed doors and plain overlight. Also visible are the vestiges of a segmental pediment which has been hacked off. To either side c1840 canted bay windows with single lights to sides and 3-lights to front, each light being staff moulded and with round lobed trefoil head and metal glazing bars. Directly over are two similar bay windows with embattled parapets above. Between them is a 2-light window with similar lights set under flat hoodmould. Above again a similar, but shallower 2-light central window and flanking similar 3-light windows. South elevation has similar c1840 two storey bay window with 3-light window over, to west side, except each light has pointed head not trefoil. South elevation also has a considerable quantity of medieval masonry to ground floor. West elevation retains its C17 windows with 3-light recessed and chamfered window to ground floor and similar 2-light windows to north and south on first and second floors. Between them are single light recessed stair windows with C19 octagonal leaded panes. North elevation has central two storey tower with C20 window to west, to west of which the main house has another C20 window. Above, the tower has a blocked recessed and chamfered mullion and transomed window to north and east. To west, the main house has similar window with leaded lights and iron bars, above which is a similar blocked window.	IISTAR	05/02/1952

		Remains of former chapel. Early C13 with later alterations. Sandstone, capped to top of walls with plain tiles. Remains of south wall and a corner of the east wall survive but little else. South wall has plain plinth with three thin chamfered lancets with continuous moulded hoods and sill bands to south side. The north elevation of the same windows have nook shafts to sides with superbly carved foliated capitals and above, moulding round top of arches with hoodmould above springing from finely carved corbel heads or foliated bosses. To east side of these windows the plinth has low doorway through with segmental arched head. East wall to west side has another carved corbel head and the remains of another nook shaft. Inside the building is a plain stone circular font probably contemporary with the chapel. Also a scheduled ancient monument.
